PAROCHIAL NOTES AND DATES

THE area comprising the present parish of St. Laurence O'Toole was entirely covered by the tide until the beginning of the 18th century. In the year 1717 the work of reclamation from the sea was commenced by the building of the North and East Walls. These works were completed about 1728, when the members of the Corporation of the day drew lots for the distribution among themselves of the lands to be reclaimed from the sea. Hence in Civic records the district is described as the North Lotts. In 1791 the new Custom House was finished, and the erection of shops, warehouses and residences on the North Wall frontage followed. Then came streets marked out at right angles and parallel to the river bearing Corporation names, such as Mayor Street, Sheriff Street, Commons Street, Guild Street, etc., etc. Next came Nowfoundland (still retaining this title) with its numerous offshoots till now bearing the names of the lucky ones who drew the lots already mentioned.

In the early forties of the last century the immigration of a large body of workers on the new railway to the North increased the population of the district to such an extent that the Archbishop (Dr. Murray) instructed the Administrator of the Pro-Cathedral (Dr. Hamilton) to commence a Chapel of Ease, to be dedicated to St. Laurence O'Toole, the Patron Saint of the diocese. In 1850 the new church was opened for service. In 1852 Archbishop Murray died, and was succeeded by Archbishop Cullen, who erected the district into a separate parish, naming as first parish priest the Rev. Michael Farrington (1853-1864). The succession of Pastors was as follows:—Rev. Edward O'Connell (1864-1877), Rev. Thomas O'Donnell (1877-1892), Rev. Michael Archdeacon Brady (1892-1904), Rev. Sylvester Bourke (1904-1908), Rev. James Brady, appointed 1908.

In 1882 the happy event of the coming of the Sisters of Charity to the parish took place. The Convent buildings were blessed and opened by Archbishop McCabe on the 19th November, 1882. In 1892 the schools at East Wall commenced life with an attendance of about 400 pupils. In latter years the buildings have been extended to accommodate over twice that number, and yet they are too small. A site has been purchased on Church Road for a new school when required. The present Catholic population of the parish numbers about 15,000.

CHURCH ROAD.

The new Chapel of Ease on Church Road, dedicated to St. Joseph, was opened on Christmas Day, 1919, the site having been presented by Messrs. Martin, North Wall. The Presbytery adjoining was finished in 1920.

In the beginning of the 18th century Church Road was one of the principal thoroughfares connecting the port with North Dublin. It is plainly marked on an old map of Dublin, 1717, as leading from East Wall and joining North Wall at the foot of the present Guild Street. In 1885 the lower part of Church Road disappeared, and the parish was practically cut in two by the new loop-lines of railway and by the canal. The origin of the name of the road is involved in obscurity, but it is supposed that as the City was extending in that direction at the time, a church should be built there. Might one venture an opinion that Church authorities had something to say in the matter, as Archbishop Edmund Byrne just then (1707) was busy outlining a new parish to take in the lands around Church Road lately rescued from the sea. The first parish priest of the new parish (St. Mary's, 1707) was Canon John Pinegar (afterwards Archbishop of Dublin, 1733-52), for some years curate of St. Michan's and a native of the parish. The new P.P. had the strange experience of having been appointed to a parish that had no church or chapel of any sort within its borders. Of course his first care was to find a site for a Parochial Church. At all events Liffey Street, and not Church Road, after a long search was selected for the new church, and Church Road had to wait over 200 years to justify its name, no ecclesiastical building having meanwhile graced the road till our present Chapel of Ease was built in 1919.

In 1786 Archbishop Troy removed his mensal parish from Francis Street to Liffey Street, the church there serving as Metropolitan Church 'till the opening of Marlboro' Street Pro-Cathedral by Archbishop Murray on the Feast of St. Laurence O'Toole, 1825. Since that two other new parishes were separated from St. Mary's—St. Agatha's, in 1865, and St. Laurence O'Toole's, in 1853, which in its turn in the designs of Providence may give a new parish to the rapidly growing district of Church Road.

Relic of St. Laurence O'Toole.

This Relic was brought by the Parish Priest in the year 1913 from the town of Eu, in Normandy, where the Saint died November 14th, 1180. One of the most beautiful 13th century cathedrals in Normandy was raised over the remains of the Saint. During the recognition of the Relics after the Revolution in 1841 some of the phalanges of the fingers became detached from the rest of the body. One of these passed into the possession of the Archpriest of the Cathedral, in whose hands it remained till it was presented in person to the Parish Priest of St. Laurence O'Toole's in presence of Dr. Donnelly, Bishop Assistant of Dublin, on the occasion of their visit to Eu in 1913.
